An eastbound Burlington Northern coal train snakes through the otherworldly scenery of the North Dakota Badlands near Sully Springs in the summer of 1991. The Badlands, located in North and South Dakota, is an area of sparse vegetation and colorful rock formations that were formed after millions of years of sedimentary build-up and erosion. On the point of the coal train is 16-month-old SD60M No. 9244. When this photo was taken, the SD60M was a state-of-the-art locomotive, equipped with a comfort cab and a 3,800-horsepower prime mover.
