Washoe Tribe of Nevada/California Orders Face2Face

October 12, 2010, Moss Beach, California.

Washoe tribe became the second Native American tribe to use Face2Face. “The Washoe are an ancient people with ties to the California and Great Basin cultures. Our language dialect is Hokan, distinctive to the Washoe. Traditionally the tribe is comprised of three geographic bands of Washoe; the Welmelti—northern band, the Hungalelti—southern band, the Pauwalu—valley people. We lived in a rich environment and broad landscape from well-watered mountain forests and alpine meadows to Pinion-juniper woodlands with Lake Tahoe as the center of Washo culture; the Washoe and the land are inseparable.”

Richard Varner, Chief of Police of Washoe Tribe ordered Face2Face system to integrate it into the ongoing drug educational activities of the tribe.

The original version of Face2Face was developed using a federal grant given to the Hopeland Indian tribe in Mendocino County, California. The tribal police have been using their Face2Face system in drug prevention education since 2009.

Face2Face system has been developed to fight the Methamphetamine epidemic by showing people at risk how their faces will look like in 6 months, 1 year and 3 years after using meth. By personalizing the drug awareness message, Face2Face is effectively used in education and prevention by showing the shocking visual changes meth causes. To date there are close to 60 law enforcement and educational users, including the DEA, Air Force, US Marines, and many sheriff and police departments.

Face2Face software runs on Windows Vista and W7 computers, comes with unlimited tech support and upgrades. The software is fully automatic - with a single click the head is created. Buttons allow viewing and printing the 6 month, 1 year and 3 year images.

Face2Face (with Fuji camera, software) sells for $3,795 - Currently on sale for $2,995.
