US Air Force, DEA deploys Face2Face

September 1, 2009, Moss Beach, California

The US Air Force acquired a copy of Face2Face to use it with its own drug educational program. Paul Howell, Demand Reduction Program Manager at the Okinawa AFB in Japan will conduct classes for both USAF personnel and families.

DEA (Drug Enforcement Agency) has purchased several Face2Face programs. The agency has close to two dozen regional offices in the US that conduct Demand Reduction classes. Diana Apodaca of the EL Paso Field division has been trained to use Face2Face as part of her Demand Reduction activities. The Los Angeles office has purchased two systems to be used by Special Agents. Another system is being planned for a permanent DEA exhibition at the Santa Ana Discovery Museum.

Face2Face system has been developed for the Mendocino County (California) Sheriff's request to fight the Methamphetamine epidemic by showing people at risk how their faces will look like in 6 months, 1 year and 3 years after using meth. By personalizing the drug awareness message, Face2Face is effective to educate and prevent meth use by showing the shocking visual changes meth causes.

Face2Face combines hardware and software to capture and alter a human face in 3D. The hardware consists of two 12 Megapixel digital cameras, hardware mount, tripod and remote controller. Face2Face software runs on Windows XP or Vista computers, comes with unlimited tech support and upgrades. The software is fully automatic - with a single click the head is created. Buttons allow to view and print the 6 month, 1 year and 3 year images.

Face2Face (with 2 digital cameras, software, remote) sells for $2,999.
