

KidGlue

Keekaroo Vs. Stokke Highchair Review

By Kidglue Team on June 5th, 2009

Parenting definitely includes spending money and lots of it. From childcare, to baby food, to diapers, to an extra plane ticket for any child over two, these expenses can really add up. While there are definitely many reasons to spend money, there is no room for burning money. When it comes to baby gear, definitely spend time researching the competition—You may not only find good value, but also some extra money to take care of you for a change! A high chair is definitely one of those baby gear staples that you want to make sure is a good, solid purchase. The high chair needs to be safe, sturdy, comfortable, and easy to clean.

Notice, I didn't say that it needs to be expensive! When I searched for my child's ideal high chair, I fell in love with the Stokke Tripp Trapp. It was designed well, wooden, adjustable, and backed by a reputable company. It was also extremely expensive! On my mission to find a better product that would leave a smaller hole in our bank account, I stumbled across the Keekaroo high chair in the back advertising section of Parenting magazine. It offered a similar design and specs, but also offered me an extra $100 to spend on myself! I'll admit— I probably spent my savings on diapers, onesies, A & D, and books promising to put my baby to sleep instead of getting my hair and nails done. Here's how they stack up:

FEATURES	Stokke® Tripp Trapp Chair	Keekaroo™ Height Right™ Chair
Adjustable Seat Plate	√	√
Adjustable Foot Plate	√	√
Optional Tray	Not Available	√
Age Range	6 months to adult (up to 300 lbs.)	6 months to adult (up to 250 lbs.)
Warranty	7 years	5 years
Optional Accessories Include:	Cloth cushions, Baby rail	Comfort Cushions, Infant Insert, Cloth cushions, Wooden grab rail, Wooden tray
Care	Easy to clean wood	Easy to clean wood
Color Options	Ten	Natural Wood
PRICE	$250	$150

[what's this?] Sponsored Links baby gear

There are no results for baby gear.

Comments

Keekaroo Vs. Stokke Highchair Review | KidGlue | Baby Gear Central

June 5th, 2009 - 7:07:39 AM

[...] Go here to read the rest: Keekaroo Vs. Stokke Highchair Review | KidGlue [...]

Leslie

June 5th, 2009 - 10:22:53 AM

I have the Keekaroo too and no complaints so far. It's been great!

Tania

June 5th, 2009 - 3:08:49 PM

I love the Keekaroo Highchair too ... I bought my Keekaroo Stroller and Keekaroo highchair at thePepperkids.com - great service !

Dawn

June 14th, 2009 - 6:04:13 PM

I love my keekaroo highchair and stroller. They are both great alternatives to higher priced items (stokke and McClaren) and I don't feel like I sacrificed quality in any way. I love the wooden tray as well. I would recommend Keekaroo to anyone.