Vermont Wildflower's Fun & Interesting Fact

Hummingbirds

How do hummingbirds eat?

Hummingbirds are very small birds with a high metabolism. A great deal of energy is spent flying, so they must feed almost constantly. Hummingbirds can consume up to 50% of their weight in sugar (nectar solution) each day. They usually feed on nectar and insects. Hummingbirds actually lap up the nectar with their tongues. A lot of people think that hummingbirds have a hollow tongue like a straw. Their tongues do have grooves on the sides that collect nectar. When the bill constricts, the hummingbird can swallow the nectar from flowers and feeders. Hummingbirds are able to perch and will do so at feeders regularly. Because they fly so much, they have poorly developed feet. They can barely walk at all. The hummingbird is much more comfortable in flight.

Feeding Hummingbirds

It is important to keep any nectar feeder clean and filled with fresh solution.

Hummingbird Flight

The flight of hummingbirds is amazing to watch. They are able to fly up, down, forward, backward and sideways. They can stop in midair. Hummingbirds are famous for their aerial display. Some displays are courtship displays; other displays are aggressive. Hummingbirds fly great distances when they are migrating. The Ruby-throated Hummingbird migrates approximately 600 miles across the Gulf of Mexico.

Hummingbird Song

Hummingbirds lack a true song. Instead, they vocalize chirping notes. Most calls are short buzz trills and chirps. Hummingbirds' wings 'buzz' or make a whirring sound while the birds are in flight. This sound is referred to as a "wing whistle." Birds frequently vocalize to attract a mate.

Hummingbirds in the US?

There are about 16 species of hummingbirds in the U.S. and Canada. It was traditionally thought that Ruby-throated Hummingbirds were the only Hummingbird found east of the Mississippi River, however, recent bird banding research has documented 11 other species of Hummingbirds in the east. Check with your local Wild Birds Unlimited store for birds that have been sighted in your area.

Vermont Wildflower's Fun & Interesting Fact Ladybugs

There are 5,000 different kinds of ladybugs worldwide. A female ladybug will lay more than 1000 eggs in her life. They beat their wings 85 times a second when flying. Aphids are their favorite food. Ladybugs chew from side to side, not up and down. Ladybugs make a chemical that smells & tastes terrible so that birds & predators won't eat them. The spots on a ladybug fade as the ladybug gets older. When hibernating, ladybugs feed on stored fat. They won't fly if the temperature is below 55 degrees. The ladybug is the official state insect of several states. The male ladybug is smaller than the female.

Vermont Wildflower's Fun & Interesting Fact Dragonflies

A dragonfly is any insect belonging to the order Odonata, the suborder Epiprocta or, in the strict sense, the infraorder Anisoptera. It is characterized by large multifaceted eyes, two pairs of strong transparent wings, and an elongated body. Dragonflies typically eat mosquitoes, midges and other small insects like flies, bees, and butterflies. They are usually found around lakes, ponds, streams, and wetlands because their larvae, known as "nymphs", are aquatic. Dragonflies do not normally bite or sting humans (though they will bite in order to escape, for example, if grasped by the abdomen); in fact, they are valued as a predator that helps control the populations of harmful insects, such as mosquitoes. It is because of this that dragonflies are sometimes called "mosquito hawks" in North America. The life cycle of the dragonfly, from egg to death of adult, varies from six months to as much as six or seven years. Female dragonflies lay eggs in or near water, often in or on floating or emergent plants. Most of the life cycle is spent in the larval (naiad, aka nymph) form, beneath the water surface, using internal gills to breathe, and catching other invertebrates or even vertebrates such as tadpoles and fish. In the adult (flying) stage, larger species of dragonfly, can live as long as four months. Dragonflies are the world's fastest insects and, although estimates of their speed vary wildly, most credible authorities say they are capable of reaching speeds of between 30 and 60 km/h (19 to 38 mph). A study showed that dragonflies can travel as much as 137 km (85 mi) in one day. Dragonflies have excellent eyesight due to their eye structure. Their compound eyes have up to 30,000 facets, each of which is a separate light-sensing organ or ommatidium, arranged to give nearly a 360° Field of vision.

It was recently discovered that dragonflies employ a particular optical illusion, termed motion camouflage, to stalk other insects that invade their territory. The research suggests that a dragonfly can move in such a way as to project itself as a stationary object while speedily attacking its victims. These findings illustrate for the first time how dragonflies use complex camouflaging techniques during aerial combat. Dragonflies can be single winged or double winged and come in a variety of colors. There are approx. 5000 species on every continent with the exception of Antarctica. There are approx. 450 different species found in the United States.

Vermont Wildflower's Fun & Interesting Fact

Bumble & Honey Bees

Bumblebees are among the most endearing and familiar of our insects. The sight and sound of bees droning methodically from flower to flower is a quintessential part of a summer's day. Sadly, changes to the farmed countryside have not been kind to our bumblebees. The reason that bumblebees have declined in the countryside is simple. Bees feed exclusively on pollen and nectar, and there are far fewer flowers in the countryside than there once were. Wildflower gardens now provide a valuable flower-rich refuge in an impoverished landscape, and as a result have become a stronghold for some bumblebee species. Bumblebees and honeybees are social insects: they live in a colony. Bees are four-winged insects, usually with a sting. There are over 12,000 species, but only about 600 of them are social in habit. Among the social bees are the honeybee (or hive bee) and the bumblebee. The bumblebee is round and furry and moves around slowly. The honeybee has a more streamlined body and moves around much faster (about 15 miles/hour). Most bees are pacific unless you disturb them. The weather often affects the temper of bees. On windy and cloudy days, when they are unable to search for nectar and pollen, bees will be more aggressive. Bees have five eyes. Two large compound eyes and three simple eyes. Bees can perceive movements that are separated by 1/300th of a second. Humans can only sense movements separated by 1/50th of a second. Bees can't recognize the color red, but they can see ultraviolet colors. Honeybees fly 55,000 miles and visit 2 million flowers to produce one pound of honey. In one trip, a worker will visit between 50 and 100 flowers. Honeybees communicate with each other through a dance "language". Bumblebees live in small nests and therefore never swarm. They are larger and stronger than honeybees and more adapted to fertilize plants in which the pollen and nectar lie deep, as in red clover. They are also able to work in colder weather than the honeybee. Bumblebees don't produce a lot of honey, just enough to feed their young, but are an integral part of pollination! When bumblebees sting they do not lose their stinger and die like honeybees. The only natural enemy of a bumblebee is a skunk! Bet you didn't know that!

Vermont Wildflower's Fun & Interesting Fact
Songbirds

A songbird or oscine is a bird in which the vocal organ is developed in such a way as to produce various sound notes, commonly known as bird song. There is evidence to suggest that songbirds evolved about 50 million years ago. This bird song is essentially territorial in that it communicates the identity & whereabouts of an individual to other birds and also signals sexual intentions. It is not to be confused with bird calls, which are used for alarms and contact, and are especially important in birds that feed or migrate in flocks. Although many songbirds have songs which are pleasant to the human ear, this is not invariably the case. Songbirds are on a decline in the United States, especially the Eastern seaboard & is due in part to the decline in habitat & food supplies. Creating a wildflower garden or meadow will increase your population of songbirds and create the environment that they are slowly loosing.

Woodland

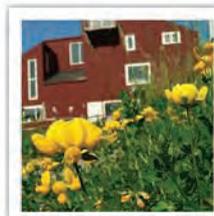

& RARE WILDFLOWER SPECIES

Our Hand Gathered, Rare and Woodland Species selections below contain photos, common and botanical names, price by available sizes and requirements for each. The species in this section are usually very difficult to find. The sizes listed for each species are normally what is available to purchase, but if you have a need for a larger quantity of any of these seeds, be sure to ask us and we'll see what we can do to help you obtain them. All, unless otherwise indicated are Perennials. Some species, such as many woodlands take longer as they need periods of dormancy before growing, but are well worth the wait!

Bee Balm Seeds Monarda fistulosa
Sun / Partial Shade, Up to 3 ft.
Every year in June and July Bee Balm blooms in intense shades of pink and red. Butterflies and hummingbirds find them irresistible. Leaves are mint scented and used to make Oswego tea.

Packet $3.95

Bird's Foot Trefoil Seeds Lotus corniculatus
Sun / Partial Shade, 12-24 in.
Aggressive legume, leaves with 3 leaflets, flowers yellow, resembling a bird's foot. Also called Bacon and Eggs, Bread and Butter, it makes a good ground cover or filler for a waste area or along roadsides. Blooms from June through July.

Packet $2.95

Black Cohosh Seeds Cimicifuga racemosa
Sun / Partial Shade, Up to 5 ft.
Prefers to grow in full shade to dappled shade. It prefers a moist soil rich in organic matter but will do fine in a dryer organic soil. It is the larval food for the Spring Blue Azure butterfly, & also attracts a lot of different insects that feed on its nectar. Joe Pye weed makes an excellent companion for Black Cohosh as do ferns and woodland ground covers. Packet $4.95

Blood Root Seeds Sanguinaria canadensis Prefers shaded, moist woodlands & is native to North America. Blood root is also endangered. It is one of the first to appear in spring, with delicate white flowers & a distinctive wrap around leaf. Indians used the root juice as body paint. Also used by early settlers as cures from skin cancer to sore throats, warts, fungus, ringworm etc. The FDA also approved use of the root in toothpastes as an anti-bacterial and anti-plaque agent. Packet $4.95

Blue Eyed Grass Seeds Sisyrinchium iridaceae
Partial Shade
As you might expect from the common name, blue-eyed grass has grass-like foliage with a purple flower. However, it is in the Iris family. Usually this six petaled flower will begin to flower in April and doesn't stop blooming until the end of July or August.

Packet $4.95

Blue Bead Lily Seeds Clintonia borealis
Partial Sun / Shade / Woodland, Up to 18 in.
A hardy rhizomatous perennial native to eastern North America. It grows to 18 inches, with a few leaves 12 inches long, clusters of small, nodding greenish-yellow flowers, and later produces bright blue berries that give the plant its common name. Useful in moist, shady places; does well in the woodland garden.

Packet $4.95

Blue Wild Indigo Seeds Baptisia australis
Sun, Up to 4 ft.
Spikes of dark violet-blue pea shaped flowers on top of grey-green stems covered in blue green leaves which remain attractive 'til the frosts turn them black.

Packet $3.95

Bottle Gentian Seeds Gentiana andrewsii
Sun / Partial Shade, 1-2 ft.
This Gentian's bright blue flowers never fully open, giving them their characteristic bottle-like appearance. One of the last plants to bloom in fall. Add a touch of elegance to the fall garden with this perennial favorite!

Packet $4.95

Butterfly Weed Seeds Asclepias tuberosa
Sun / Partial Shade
Flowers are a nectar source for many butterflies and leaves are a food source for monarch butterfly larvae (caterpillars). Also commonly called pleurisy root in reference to a prior medicinal use of the plant roots to treat lung inflammations. Brilliant orange flowers.

Packet $3.95

Canada Lily Bulblets Seeds Lilium canadense
Partial Sun / Shade / Woodland
The Canada Lily is a rare native wildflower. Bulblets or scales are very difficult to come by so we have a very limited quantity on hand. It will be the show piece of your garden. This lily will grow but with extreme patience. It can take a few years like many woodland or rare species, but well worth the wait. This is not seed form but bulb scales and will come with special growing instructions. Packet $9.95

Cardinal Flower Seeds Lobelia cardinalis
Sun / Partial Shade / Woodland, Up to 4 ft. stalks
Cardinal Flower can be found in open or wooded, moist places along streams. The bright red blooms are produced during late summer. Cardinal Flower is one of the favorite foods of hummingbirds.

Vermont Wildflower's Fun & Interesting Fact

Monarch Butterflies

In addition to being beautiful, monarch butterflies have an amazing life cycle. Many people—students, naturalists, scientists and others—have made it their life's work to study them in North America. Monarchs feed on Milkweed and have been reported to feed on 27 of them, but they undoubtedly feed on other flowers as well. Adult monarchs drink nectar from many species of flowers. Nectar contains sugar, which serves as the main energy source for monarchs. Monarchs have an effective chemical defense to protect them from predation; when they eat milkweed, they sequester the poisonous cardiac glycosides in the milkweed.

Cardiac glycosides are poisonous to vertebrates; as a result, most monarchs face little predation from frogs, lizards, mice, birds & other species with backbones. Their bright colors also serve as a warning to predators that they contain these poisonous chemicals. Monarchs are in the butterfly family Nymphalidae. Members of this family appear to have only 4 legs, but they really do have 6; their front pair of legs is greatly reduced in size and tucked up under their head.

W I L D F L O W E R Planting + Info Guide

Detailed Instructions

How Much Seed Do I Need?

In planning a wildflower meadow or garden, first you need to choose your site and estimate the square footage of the area. To find the square footage of any square or rectangular area, simply multiply the length in feet times the width in feet. For example, a border 50 feet long and 10 feet wide is 500 sq. ft. in area (50 X 10 = 500). For a circle, the area is equal to "pi" r squared, or pi (3.1) times the radius of your circle, squared. If your circle is 20 feet across, its radius is half of that or 10 ft. So to get the square footage of the circle: 3.1 X 10 X 10 = 310 sq. ft. The amount of seed you should plant depends on the flower display you want. Most usually want dense or maximum bloom. All mixtures are pure wildflower seed, no fillers or grasses. The denser you sow your wildflower area with seed, the more you will hold out the weeds and grasses. Just be sure not to over seed, so your wildflowers do not compete with themselves for space!

Our suggestion for coverage is as follows:

1 oz. up 100 sq ft	1 lb covers 1,000 - 2000 sq ft
¼ lb covers 250 - 500 sq ft	5 lbs covers 5,000 - 10,000 sq ft
½ lb covers 500 - 1,000 sq ft	10 lbs covers 10,000 - 20,000 sq ft
5 lbs covers 5,000 - 10,000 sq ft	50 lbs covers 1+ Acres

SEEDING RATES ARE APPROX. DEPENDING ON THE DENSITY OF COVERAGE YOU DESIRE!

Note: If you have a large site, from ½ acre to several acres, your planting rate may be affected by land conditions. If you have heavy weeds on the site now, some erosion, generally poor soil, or other land problems, additional seed is usually the most economical solution. If your site does have these types of problems and you want to build in some assurance of full coverage, use a per pound coverage rate of 1000 sq ft. We usually suggest 50 lbs. per acre.

How To Plant Like a Pro!

When to Plant:

The optimum time to plant wildflower seed in your area depends on your climate and rainfall patterns, as well as the species you are planting. In cooler climates; plant annuals, perennials or mixtures of annuals and perennials in spring, early summer or late fall. In milder or warm climates; plant wildflower seed during the cooler months of the year, fall through spring. Perennials can be sown spring, summer and fall. If planting perennials late summer be sure to allow 10 weeks growing time before plants go dormant for the winter months. Spring planting: when there is no further chance of a killing frost, meaning that your night time temperatures are maintaining 45 degrees and above. Summer plantings: annuals or mixes containing annuals can be planted through mid-summer. Depending on your climate you want to insure that you have enough time to enjoy all the annuals in your growing season. Perennials can be planted through the summer up until 10 weeks before your cold weather sets in. Fall plantings: in areas with freezing weather, a fall planting must be after a killing frost when your daytime temperatures are maintaining 45 degrees and below but before the ground freezes. In other words, when you are sure cold weather has set in. Killing frosts usually happen at 28 degrees Fahrenheit. Fall plantings in cooler climates are dormant plantings and should be late enough so that the ground temperature is low but the ground is not yet frozen. Seeds must remain dormant – the seeds will germinate in spring. In areas of no frost, plant as your rainy season begins. It is never too late to plant – just ask us for details on how and what to plant!

Soil Preparation:

This is the most important step in obtaining success of your wildflower planting, whether it is a small garden or a large meadow. Remove all existing growth, either by hand , roto-tilling, rough or power raking. Till only deep enough to remove all old roots. Deep tilling may bring up dormant weed seeds lying beneath which will compete with your flowers. If you want to be sure your soil is "weed seed free", you'll have to till, wait for the crop of new weeds to grow, usually one to three weeks and then do one of two things; kill them down with one of the safe, non-residual method of using white vinegar; or to till again as in step one. If you use the vinegar method, then once the weeds are dead, rake them out and seed your wildflowers without roto-tilling again. If using the roto-till method, you can seed after the second or third tilling. For those of you that wish to use an herbicide, please read the label for any detrimental effects it may cause. If you choose to use this, use the same steps as if using the vinegar.

About Fertilizer:

When you choose to plant wildflowers there is usually minimal weeding done...and fertilizer will encourage the weeds and grasses. Fertilizer is not necessary for a great wildflower garden or meadow. (No one fertilizes in the wild or along roadsides), but if you want this extra boost for your flowers, fertilize only where you are willing to weed.

Sowing:

Once your soil is prepared and free of previous growth, it's important to sow immediately. (If you let time go by between preparation and spreading your seed, you're giving possible weeds an advantage over your wildflower seed). You can use a hand crank seed sower, but most simply scatter the seed by hand. If you want to be sure to get good, even coverage, divide your seed into two roughly equal parts, in two buckets or cans. Then add clean sandbox sand to both halves, roughly 4-5 parts of sand to 1 part of seed. The sand does two things: It "dilutes" the seed, making it easier to sow evenly, and since it's light-colored, it shows you "where you've been" on the dark soil as you go. Next, sow one bucket's mix over your whole area. Then go back in the opposite direction and do the same with the second bucket. This way, you should have even spreading and no bare spots. Once seed is sown, do not rake or cover it in any way. If you can, use a lawn roller or lay down a large board and walk on it to compress (squash down) the seed into the bare soil. Remember, some of the seed you're sowing is tiny; even the lightest covering of soil can stop it from germinating. Keep your new seedbed moist until seedlings are about 6-8" tall. After that, they should be self-sufficient; however watering during droughts will keep your flowers blooming.

Know your Annuals, Perennials, Biennials:

If you are planting one of our regional mixes, your seed is approximately 50% wild annuals, which will bloom the first year, and 50% wild perennials, which won't bloom until the second year. The annuals are quick-growing, quick-blooming and will bloom for months, and then die with a killing frost. Most do reseed, but the seed must fall on bare ground to re-grow the next spring. Perennials are the flowers that "come back every year" from the same roots, forming expanding clumps in your meadow over the years. Biennials bloom the second year, and are killed by that year's frost. However, they are heavy re-seeders, and usually reappear in the meadow.

Maintenance:

The amount of work you want to put into your meadow area is up to you. The only requirement is a once-a-year mowing in the fall after killing frosts—to disperse seed and to keep down brushy growth. Another good practice is to identify areas that have become weak or weed-filled, and to reseed those spots, the same way you repair bare spots in a lawn. Once you are able to identify weeds, hand pulling is a viable method of control for the small to medium garden. Any weed that you can pull will constitute to the success of your garden for years. One weed can disperse thousands of seeds, so get 'em out of there if you can. If you have a large planting and you notice an area of weeds, then the above method of re-tilling and re-seeding that area is your way to obtain maximum success.

Be Patient and Enjoy!

Be patient while your garden or meadow establishes but once it has you'll notice small wildlife, many birds, butterflies and other insects that are attracted to your wild garden; observing these visitors is one of the greatest pleasures of growing wildflowers. Mow paths through your meadow, put in benches and bird-feeders, and enjoy it all for years to come.

Common Questions

What can I plant for the honey bees, butterflies etc.? All wildflowers are beneficial but we recommend our Deluxe Mix which has everything for everybody or our Hummingbird/Butterfly or Honey Bee Mix!

Can I grow wildflowers in full shade? The technical answer is no, all wildflowers need some sort of light. There is one wildflower that will do well in complete shade, Forget-me-not and you can also use our Woodland or Hand Gathered and Rare species. Call or e-mail us for advice.

Is the Queen Anne's Lace you sell invasive? NO, absolutely not. We do not sell invasive species. The Queen Anne's Lace we sell is the annual, (Ammi majus) and not the invasive, Daucus Carota.

Can I use more than one mix in the same area? Yes, mix and match away! You can also mix mixes together or add additional species - the creativity is endless!

When Should I Plant? In Spring, Summer or Fall; see above for complete info!

How do I store my seeds? Store seeds in a cool and dry place. If stored properly seeds are viable for years!

What's better - A Fall or Spring seeding? Some only believe in a Spring seeding while others only believe in a Fall Seeding. At the Farm, we seed Spring, Summer and Fall in order to take advantage of the entire growing season!

Can I order now and have you ship later? Yes, we ship when you want to - just let us know when - we're at your service!

Should I add anything to my soil? Technically, no - but some may need to add lime, fertilizer, gypsum or other additives. (Contact us for details)

How often should I water? Once germination happens, keep moist until seedlings are 6-8" tall - you may need to water every other day unless Mother Nature is providing the rain.

Can I transplant my wildflowers? Most wildflowers do not like transplanting - so plant your seeds where you want to see them grow!

Your Best Value -- You get more for your money when you shop with the Vermont Wildflower Farm. Here's how:

We never leave quality to chance. If something doesn't meet our rigorous (some say fanatical) standards, you won't see it in the products we offer. We pack everything by hand - just like you'd do it yourself. We also grow many of our own products. This extraordinary attention to detail lets you rest assured that every product you order from us is perfect and of the highest quality. We would NEVER just substitute a product on your order and we rarely would ever call you to say a product is on backorder. Occasionally, as we have new stock arriving year round something may be in transit to us but if your order is delayed for any reason we will let you know. Availability depends on harvests - if an item is not available on your order due to crop failure or other circumstances, we will notify you first to see if you wish to substitute for something else! • When we pack your items into their shipping containers, we put our reputation in it. You'll appreciate the attention to detail and the difference of our careful thoughtfulness regarding your package. • Not many deliver like we do. We usually ship your order (unless it is an advanced sale item) within 1 business day of processing it. • All phone calls are toll free using our 1-855-8GOWILD toll free number! • Our Customer Service staff and experts are available every day to insure your success! • Everything's guaranteed. No cutting corners. No fudging on quality. No excuses!

That's why... A purchase from Vermont Wildflower Farm isn't merely the best you can buy - it's the best value too. High quality products and your success are of utmost importance to us. We've been maintaining these high standards for over 30 years!

Understandably we cannot be responsible for various factors over which we have no control such as; weather, improper preparation, soil, premature or late plantings, neglect, drought and other natural conditions or improper storage of your seed/plants. It is mutually agreed that in no case shall our liability surpass the purchase price of the product.

Product Reviews! Help us and your fellow consumer by reviewing and rating products that you have purchased. Let us know how it worked for you, what you thought about the product, the results and our service! We are always striving to improve. Each and every review is an opportunity to offer the pros or cons of your experience in order to better inform other consumers. It is also a great opportunity for us to hear back from you. We are always looking for more ways to take our products, service, website etc. to higher levels. Striving for perfection will allow us to meet your garden needs & goals in an ever changing industry! Your opinions & reviews will help us do just that! We encourage you to go on our website, e-mail or mail to give your feedback!
